Commissioner Abernathy:

As the parent of a 4-year-old little girl I'm extremely troubled by the violence on television. Our family strictly limits its TV viewing to two or three hours a week and that is usually spent viewing nature shows or a fitness program.

However, although we make the effort to choose wholesome programming what we are confronted with during our viewing of something as harmless as animal planet or a Denise Austin workout program are the commercials. TV stations will use a commercial to preview a movie or other show with extreme violence/blood and/or some overtly sexual images.

I find this very frustrating as well as potentially frightening and/or harmful to my little girl.

I urge you to please do something about this situation and the rest of the extreme violence and overt sexuality we are subjected to on TV. Our nation is going down the tubes and you can do something to help stem the tide.

Sincerely,

Lisa Salan

It is my opinion that the responsibility of broadcast tv is to ONLY allow safe, wholesome, unoffensive, bad language & sex/inuendo free programming to be aired due to the free & readily available nature of nature this format. Cable, satellite etc is a pay service (not as readily available as free, and requires effort & intent to obtain the service) that has better protections against accidental (or intentional) viewing by persons who should not be able to view such programming.

Commissioner Adelstein:

Dear Mr. Chairman and Commissioners:

My wife and I have seriously cut down on our television view (and movie attendance) since we became parents 6.5 years ago. Our family has basically turned off cable tv and switched to the Sky Angel satellite network for most of our television viewing. We do receive two local television broadcasts which we use to monitor weather, and to see PBS, but otherwise we TV is severely limited in our home to protect our son from harmful violence, sexual indecencies, and adult concepts we don't wish him to learn except at our timing and through our teaching.

We hope you will curb violence on TV and sexual indecencies as well. Even commercials of later night shows are offensive to us, use language we don't want our son to learn, and show him sexual images he doesn't need to view. Some of the commercials even air during the prime after school hours. It's disgraceful and disgusting.

Two years ago I complained to the Weather Channel for showing sexy lingerie ads in the morning after my 4 year old noticed the "naked lady on tv!" And last fall I complained to the Hallmark Channel for running ads for M^A^S^H during afternoon programming with lots of vulgarity. I asked them if they had a head of programming who would be willing to call and explain to my 5 year old the meaning of the word "pervert."

Please help us protect our kids!
Thank you.

I am the mother of three children, ages 14, 11 and 10. I am also a public school speech and language pathologist. I have grown increasingly concerned over the years about the degree of violence and sexuality that is portrayed on regular television programming. On several occasions, I have witnessed inappropriate shows advertised during children's programming. It is naive to think that this violence, profanity and promotion of sexual promiscuity can be promoted amongst our youth without any long-lasting repercussions. I encourage the FCC to take a stand against this crime that is being committed against our children. Sure parents should monitor what their children are watching, but support our efforts to raise a generation of men and women of character and values. Thank you for your time and consideration of this matter.

Commissioner Abernathy:

Dear Sir or Madam ,

I understand you are asking parents for feedback on network TV and cable.

Our family does not support cable TV and we are quite happy that the FCC has allowed TV broadcasting to continue to be a free service and not be forced the American public to pay for view.

The quality of children's television has progressed to a very secular outlook. The only TV channels we actually allow our preschool and gradeschool children watch are PBS and the Trinity Broadcasting network. PBS has great shows like Clifford or Caillou that reinforce good moral values,. Some programming such as Sesame Street have become to liberal in their moral views on family and seek to push a political agenda that is way towards the left.

I applaud the interest of the American public and the FCC on this issue and hope that we are seeing this nation waking up to what levels of immoral programming the network and cable companies use to promote advertisers products.

I am happy that your are upping the fines for violations of a indecent behavior.

Thanks for your service.

Sincerely,

Tom Melenric

Dear Sir or Madam ,

I understand you are asking parents for feedback on network TV and cable.

Our family does not support cable TV and we are quite happy that the FCC has allowed TV broadcasting to continue to be a free service and not be forced the American public to pay for view.

The quality of children's television has progressed to a very secular outlook. The only TV channels we actually allow our preschool and gradeschool children watch are PBS and the Trinity Broadcasting network. PBS has great shows like Clifford or Caillou that reinforce good moral values,. Some programming such as Sesame Street have become to liberal in their moral views on family and seek to push a political agenda that is way towards the left.

I applaud the interest of the American public and the FCC on this issue and hope that we are seeing this nation waking up to what levels of immoral programming the network and cable companies use to promote advertisers products.

I am happy that your are upping the fines for violations of a indecent behavior.

Thanks for your service.

Sincerely,

Tom Melenric
